

This idea is completely ludicrous. How long has the consumer been able to record television for personal use? Isn't that what's called fair use? Isn't that the legal precedent set twenty or so years ago? Another issue could be money. This will make people mad. Advertising revenues will be lost. Do you realize how many people record television and commercials with their VCR's or DVD-R's when they are at work, or otherwise away from their television? Approving this regulation would be silly.
